“ Alex was a joy to know. I never had Alex in my classroom, but I was his teacher and tutor for several years. He was so much fun. I teased him and told him he not only looked like the TV Denis the Menace....he also acted like him. He knew that I said it out of fun, and he loved it. Alex stayed with us when Dick and Amy made a trip to Hong. His visit was so much fun. He and Larry played tricks on me every day. Alex loved my dog, Jack, the Dalmatian. They played every afternoon at the city park, and I did my best to keep up. Alex hated everything I cooked for dinner that week, but he never failed to say thank you, and also said, that dinner was good as he feed most of his food to Jack under the table. To say that Alex was charming would be a gross understatement. He exemplified charming.

My contact with Alex was limited as he became an adult, but when I did see him, he always had a big smile and a hug for me. I remember visiting with him when he had first become a father. He was so proud and had big plans for his family's future.

Alex will live in my memory as a very special young man who cared about his family and his friends. He was the kind of person who lifted your spirits with every interaction. I will miss him terribly. My heart is broken.
