“ Words cannot express how saddened Kristen and I were when we heard of ‘Paw Paw’s’ (as Daniel always called him) passing. I was fortunate enough to grow up knowing and calling him by the same name and he always referred to me as ‘Beav’ (again as Daniel always called me) in a very enthusiastic voice. I have too many memories of Paw Paw to share just one but all the memories share one thing in common, which is the fact that he was truly a remarkable man, lived life to the fullest, and did so with a strong character that always set an example of a true Christian, husband, father, and grandfather. He was a great example for me as a child growing up running wild at his house and he helped mold me into the man I am today. I am honored to have known him, and his greatness can be reflected in the amazing family he leaves behind. Just remember as I was once told, “Death leaves a heartache no one can heal, love leaves a memory no one can steal”. After all, we cannot experience grief without first experiencing love and happiness, and Paw Paw brought a lot of both into many lives.

Please accept our heartfelt condolences and know that our thoughts and prayers are with you at this time.

“ I was saddened at the news of the death of my friend, Junior Cauble. Junior and I stood next to each other in the Salem Men's Chorus. He said then that his favorite hymn, the one he wanted sung at his funeral, was #367 in Sing His Praise: What a day that will be. I will miss him.##imported-begin##Pete Prunkl##imported-end##
