“ Today was a day of recollection, rejoicing and transition as we lay Mamaw down to rest. She never met a stranger and always spoke her mind. She stood for family values and was the rock that held the family together. She always had a kind word and looked for the good in people. When she spoke, we'd listened with respect and honor for her words of wisdom.

Mamaw always, “Loved me more” because she had more than just love to give. Not just me, but everyone she ever came in contact with. She has always made me feel welcome to this family. She'd often call me just out of the blue; it was to tell me that she was thinking of me and that “she loved me more.” And that's all she wanted not to ask for information or wanted something done. But to simply tell me, “She loved me more.” She had a knack for calling at the right moments, no matter how my day with going horrific, she would call me just out of the blue just to tell me, “I loved me more.” When introducing me to someone, Mamaw always would introduce me as, “her grandson.” Not that I married her granddaughter or I married into her family, but I am “her grandson.” That would always make me swell with love and pride that she would think of me that way. Mamaw would then go on to inform them of my latest accomplishment and how proud she was of me, when it was I that felt the love and pride for having her in my life.

Mamaw left this life just the way she wanted, at home with her family and loved ones. For that I will be forever grateful to Beverly Ryan. I am thankful for what time Mamaw and I shared our lives together here on earth, she is now among the angels and with her love ones of her bygone.

Mamaw, I love you and I know you love me more.

I will see you in my dreams.....

“ Johnny,
George and I are so sorry to hear of the death of your mother.
Having lost George's mother just a couple of months ago, we certainly know what a hole it leaves in our lives. You are in our thoughts and prayers.
