“ Mike was one of a kind, I got to know him 26years ago. Mike would help out any one once he got to know them, he would wait to see if you were one of those people that wanted everything he had or if you just wanted help or advice from him. Mike helped me in more ways than one. I worked side by side with him and got to know him personally. He gave me finacial advice on my retirement that I'm indebted to him for life, but he also gave advice and answers to questions that only a father can give. He did these things without hesitation after my own father passed. Now into the fun.....yes he loved to stir up trouble or start a rumor.He was also a VERY frugal person. Man he could save a penny...like picking up change outside a fast food restraint drive through window or burger king and McDonald'sgiving a free refill on drink if you saved your cup, he would just walk in and refill his cup and leave getting a free drink until burger king cought on to this and he got caught, never bothered Mike he simply paid for drink and waited on next opportunity. He talked about burger king offering a free meal on back of reciept...he would take receipt of a tray or pick them up out of the parking lot. 😊 The stories go on and on like these...
