“ I often think of his kindnesses. Tom was that helping neighbor who always wanted to make your burden a little bit easier. That characteristic must have shown through to the animals in the neighborhood, too, for he was the one they always went to for a scratch between the ears or a little treat of some sort. After his passing, I went by the house to visit with Jean and their daughters, and I took my little dog Ida along, and she kept looking around for the one who was missing.
